QUESTION 1: BERLIN CONFERENCE

Key Question: What was the Berlin Conference?

1.1 Use SOURCE 1A and your own knowledge to answer the set questions.

SOURCE 1A is a picture of the Berlin Conference in 1884 on how to divide Africa between leading European powers.

SOURCE 1A

The Berlin Conference of 1884–1885, met on 15 November 1884, and after an adjournment concluded on 26 February 1885, with the signature of a General Act, regulating the European colonization and trade in Africa during the New Imperialism period. The conference was organised by Otto von Bismarck, the first chancellor of Germany, at the request of Leopold II of Belgium. The General Act of Berlin can be seen as the formalisation of the Scramble for Africa that was already in full swing. Some scholars, however, warn against an overemphasis on its role in the colonial partitioning of Africa, and draw attention to bilateral agreements concluded before and after the conference.

REASONS FOR THE COLONISATION OF AFRICA AND THE STRATEGIES

The colonisation of Africa by European powers was necessitated by several factors. Notable, among the factors was the emergence of the industrial revolution which brought about a rapid change in the socio-economic transformation and technology of the European countries. The industrial revolution led to increase in production. The progress in the industry went faster than the progress in agriculture. It was becoming increasingly hard or difficult for the agriculture to satisfy the demand for raw materials required in the industries. There was therefore, the need for the European powers, for example, the British to go outside the country to look for additional raw materials. Furthermore, as a result of the decline in agricultural production, there was the problem of how to produce enough or adequate food to feed the fast growing urban population. In other words, the rural areas in Britain for example, were finding it increasingly difficult to produce enough food to feed the increasing urban population. Similarly, there was also need for market, not only for the production of raw materials but for food to sustain the increasing population. As a result of rapid increase in technology, new products were produced at a faster rate than the populations could dispose of. Africa with her large population constituted a ready market for such products

1.5 THE ASHANTI KINGDOM

Read SOURCE 1E and answer the question that follows.

SOURCE 1E

The kingdom was located in what is now modern-day Ghana and had its capital in the city of Kumasi. The Ashanti people were known for their skill in metalworking and their control over the trade of gold and ivory. Before the arrival of Europeans, the Ashanti Kingdom was a powerful and centralised state in West Africa. The Ashanti people were known to be fierce fighters. Their slogan was "If I go forward I die. If I go backward I die. Better go forward and die."

In the late 1600s, the Portuguese traders came to the west coast of Africa and made the Akan speakers their trading partners. Chief Osei Tutu united the Akan speakers into a powerful military state. The legend goes that a Golden Stool miraculously "came down from the heavens". The Akan was well organised. Government officials were chosen on merit, there was an excellent communication in the kingdom and a set of rules was drawn up for the government.

In 1817, a British explorer entered Kumasi, the capital of the Ashanti empire. When he returned to Britain, he wrote a book called Mission from the Cape Coast castle to Ashantee. This book encouraged the British to become interested in the West Coast as a future colony.
